

Leah Day

Section A

Student Reaction Interviews

Three Elon University students each discussed their preferences when presented with the option to choose only one type of utensil for the rest of their life.

“I am adamantly for the fork,” said Emily Korn, a sophomore Political Science major.

“No matter what I end up getting, I can always use a fork.”

Another sophomore with a similar opinion defended her answer.

“The fork is the most versatile of all of the utensils,” Said Entrepreneurship major and avid foodie Sam Briggs. “If push comes to shove you can use the side as a knife and the little dip in the end as a spoon. I just feel like I use a fork most often in my day-to-day life.”

First-Year Mackenzie Wilkes took an opposing stance, pointing out that spoons can also “cut with the edge.”

“I don’t even use utensils,” said the Journalism major, “but if I had to choose, I’d pick the spoon. You can cut with the edge and pick up literally anything. Plus, I like the shape.”